A brief Statement (250 words max): Highlight your experience, skills and why you are the right person for the role:

I am currently a PhD candidate in Electrical Engineering at Imperial College London, focusing on modeling power systems dynamics and stability. Throughout my research and involvement in academia, I have recognized the importance of communication within engineering societies for advancing knowledge and building strong, collaborative communities. I have had the opportunity to present my research at various events, which has allowed me to refine my communication skills in both technical and non-technical contexts.

As part of my volunteer role with the IEEE Student Branch at Imperial College, I have been involved in organizing several events. This experience has reinforced for me how crucial clear, timely communication is in driving engagement and ensuring the success of initiatives.

I am eager to contribute to CIGRE UK NGN's growth as the Communications Lead. I believe my technical background, combined with my experience in communications, will allow me to effectively manage NGN's communication strategy and keep our community informed and engaged. I am excited about the opportunity to bring fresh ideas, support NGN's initiatives, and work with the team to continue fostering connections within our network.
